

THE LORE

The intelligent of them all built a galactic army named Wights. The team was built by Atkins. He appointed himself as their general. More and more people joined and the army increased. The Wights received a strange message. It started with beeps and slowly, they caught a radio signal. They thought it was Morse code but there was a lot of white noise. They finally tuned in to the frequency and found out that the voices were human and they were asking for help. There were still humans left they did not know about, humans who were not accounted for.

They immediately prepared 2 ships to travel. General Atkins combined Team B and K to fly out and a few members of Team U and D to go with them. He stayed back with the remaining army while he sent his right hand woman, Amiel, with them. Team B & K were on the front line. B15 was flying the first spaceship. The second space ship was being flown by D24. They started their spaceship and General Atkins told them to constantly stay connected to them. They started the journey towards the planet. They saw the Earth and started to move towards it. Just as they hit the Earth's atmosphere, something went wrong with this ship. The controls were jammed and they were not able to access anything. They were losing contact and the last thing Jennifer Atkins heard before he lost the connection was that they were in the atmosphere and the circuit was broken.

The landing was not going to look good. Amiel told everybody to hold on to those parachutes and wait for anything to happen. They were plummeting towards the Earth at a very high speed. It was as if they did not have any chance to live but somehow they were safe and crash-landed on Earth. But not as safe as they thought they were. Four people were lost that day. They managed to get out of the ship as fast as they could. They were not going to risk being in the ship while it would burn.

When they walked out, they were looking around for anybody because that is where they received a message from. They reached their destination but not very close to it. It must've been days till they actually walked out of all the ruins of buildings they crashed on. They had to hide out at night because there was something walking around. They wanted to know what it was but they did not know how to face it. There was also a constant growling sound regardless of the time of day and they could see the sea in ripples every now and then.

One day, as they were walking and looking for food in broken shops, they saw someone spying on them. They called that person out but the person ran away. They ran after them and came to a house. They saw the lights on and they approached it slowly. They saw the little girl they followed with him teenage sister sitting on the rocks eating cold food. They stayed with them for a while and asked the teenage girl, Raya, about the thing that walks at night and the ripples in the sea. Raya revealed what went down that caused the destruction and stopped the earth from ending.

The scientists researched growing hybrid animals to survive extreme conditions and they found one way. But for that, they had to dive down into the sea, which was already drowning the rest of the people and remaining animals. Their team dove deeper and deeper into the sea till they were eaten by an unknown creature. The scientists were successful in achieving the DNA of the underwater creature and they had experimented so much to give birth to a forgotten animal. He looked like a mammoth but had arms like a sloth and walked like a human. Huge teeth like mammoths that could carry the entire earth if let loose and bigger than the biggest animal. They had created an abomination. They had created the Titanus Behemoth. The scales of the water creature were helping Titanus to breathe underwater. All in all, the creature was invincible. The ripples in the sea were caused by the very animal whose DNA was stolen. But not just the DNA, the Stele of Hammurabi was also stolen to give birth to Titanus Behemoth.

Amiel decided to get some members of the team in the sea to get the Stele of Hammurabi and destroy the Behemoth. Meanwhile, General Atkins had already readied himself and his team to travel to get his team back. But it did not look good for them either. As soon as they entered the atmosphere, their ship caught fire and spiraled down to crash near the older ship. Some of the members, along with General Atkins, managed to get out of the ship before it burst into flames.

Luckily, D50 and K77 were walking towards the crash scene to find out how and why they crashed. They ran into General Atkins and their friends and brought them back to Raya's home. They both filled them in about what was going on and together, they formed a plan to find the Stele and finish off the Behemoth. Raya told them that some of the scientists are still alive and still have the Stele of Hammurabi. They are now experimenting with something else in hiding because of one successful Behemoth.

General Atkins combined Team B and K to dive in and a few members of Team U and D to dive into the deepest part of the sea. He stayed back with the remaining army while he sent Amiel with them. Amiel stayed on the submarine with B24, K33, U11, and D13 while the rest of the team went to look for this mysterious animal. As the unit swam deeper and deeper, they heard soft grumble coming from the deeper ends. They pointed in the direction and swam aggressively towards it. When they reached the end, they came across a large scaly body. They stayed at a safe distance but swam around to see where the scales were taking them. The size started to increase. The scaly body grew bigger and heavier. At one part, B44 stopped and saw that whatever this thing is, is hurt. He approached the body slowly and as soon as he touched it, the body jerked and moved rapidly. A large tail hit B44 right on his chest and he hit his head on the nearby coral. The helmet broke and it became difficult for him. He struggled but nobody could reach him. Others were face to face with this water body and watched as their team member drowned. U17 tried to swim closer to this creature but he just opened his mouth and swallowed him whole.

General Atkins prepared his units A to J and V to Z for the war and asked the rest of them to get humans to safety. Save as many living creatures as they can. General stood front in line with his units for the war. Amiel communicated with B15 and decided that they should get both the creatures to face each other. Amiel worked fast and found out that the Stele of Hammurabi was protected by the water creature called Leviathan. The Stele had fallen in the Nile and thus leading its exposure to fall upon Leviathan. This made him protect it at all costs. If fallen in the wrong hands, Stele could be used as a tool for destruction. The Stele was already hard to carve and now, the carved laws are impossible to remove. The scientists wanted to use the Stele for their experiments, to make humans and creatures that were impossible to penetrate and destroy, basically, immortals.

The units underwater were having a hard time. Leviathan was angry and hurt. It started thrashing its tail on the corals and that caused the corals to fall on the people. There were hardly going to be any survivors. Amiel was worried and so he raced his submarine to the Leviathan's location. He told his units to lure it out to the surface and they will make it face Behemoth. The war on the land was not going great either. Behemoth was destroying the cities. It crushed and crumpled and ate a lot of people who came in its way. The entire unit A was firing from the helicopters. Unit C and I were attacking it from the land with General Atkins. The attacks ranged from the most medieval weapons to the most recent ones. Unit J threw nuclear bombs at it which caused the loss of Unit I entirely. Behemoth was unscratched and untouched with everything.

Behemoth roared and swatted, causing the helicopters to collide with each other. General Atkins lost another of his units. Amiel struggled to get Leviathan to the surface. It kept on coiling back to its burrow. Suddenly, B24 had an idea. He went to the projection screen and projected an image of the Stele of Hammurabi in the water. All they had to do was make Leviathan see it. U67 swam near to its face and held its whiskers. D69 and K54 attached their ropes to a nearby coral and pulled U67 towards them. This caused the pull of whiskers and this riled the Leviathan up. It looked up and saw the projection and started swimming towards it. D69, K54 and U67 lost their lives in this attempt.

Amiel turned up the motors of the submarine and rushed it to the surface and near to the place where Behemoth was attacking the world. Leviathan was cutting it really close to the submarine and the heartbeats were increasing. It hit the submarine hard with its tail and the submarine spiraled out of the control. It turned so out of control that the entire submarine went topsy-turvy. Amiel lost his balance and hit his head on the floor, hard. B24 was too late to come and save him. D13 held Amiel close to him and U11 tried to turn the submarine around. Because of Amiel, they were much closer to the Behemoth than they thought.

U11 surfaced the submarine and ran right into the Behemoth who was standing in the water. Because of a sudden attack, it staggered a little and fell right on Leviathan. Leviathan let out a loud roar and pushed the Behemoth really hard which caused it to fall in the sea. For a few seconds, everything went quiet. The remaining units came out from the water and stood by the riverside. D13 carried Amiel's body out of the submarine and put it on the ground. General Atkins cried and everyone stood in silence to pay their respects.

After a while, they heard a loud grumble coming from the sea. Everybody looked up and saw Behemoth torn but still very much alive. Along with him, the Leviathan rose. B15 could see this from the building. He remembered Amiel and his theory about the Stele of Hammurabi. B15 asked M55 to look after the process and he ran to the scientists' lair. As soon as he entered their lab, he saw them experimenting on the Stele of Hammurabi. He pulled out his gun and attacked the machines. The machines stopped working but the scientists refused to go down. They pulled out their designed weapons and started attacking B15. He merely dodged their attacks but it wounded him deeply. Yet, he somehow managed to get his hands on the Stele of Hammurabi. One of the scientists thought it to be a great idea to attack the ceiling and that started breaking the lab. B15 merely slipped out of the lab just as the entire ceiling collapsed after him, trapping the scientists and killing a few of them.

General Atkins and his units continued their attack on the Titanus Behemoth and the Leviathan. He saw from afar that B15 was bringing the Stele to him. He had to distract the Behemoth from him or he might crush him. Behemoth, getting tired of the attacks, turned his face to General Atkins and tried to stomp on him but General was saved by mere inches. Behemoth lowered down and swatted his hands around but General dodged the attacks skillfully.

B15 finally had arrived in the zone of war. He held out the Stele of Hammurabi but nobody was paying any attention. He saw a half broken skyscraper and asked unit A to help him up. A89 turned his helicopter and threw down the ladder. B15 ran in its direction and grabbed the last bar of the ladder. The helicopter dropped him on the skyscraper and he held out the Stele of Hammurabi. He twisted and turned in a way so that the sun would reflect off of the Stele. He shone the reflection on Behemoth's eyes. When it saw where the light was coming from, it started stomping its way towards it. While doing this, many people were crushed and in these people, General Atkins fell into prey.

Just as Behemoth approached B15, he threw the Stele of Hammurabi at him. The Behemoth caught it and as soon as it did, the Leviathan turned to him. It slowly started coming out of the water. Now they all could see who the bigger creature was. The Leviathan stomped its way to the Behemoth and started dragging its tail back to the sea. Behemoth kept on roaring and thrashing but it wasn't powerful enough. The Stele of Hammurabi was taking away all its power and its strength. The Leviathan started to go underwater and the Behemoth thrashed to keep on the surface. The last they all saw it drowned in the sea of blood it had created. B15 remembered what Amiel had told him before his death "The Stele giveth the power and the Stele taketh away."

After the war ended, they had to figure out how to get out of here. B15 was sitting on the roof of a house when all of a sudden; he saw a bright red light coming from the forest. He jumped down and gathered his weapons. He called out Raya and Millie, the little girl and gathered what was remaining of his troop. It was time to find out who is out there and how to get back to their planet safely.
